Story

To the northern continent, one can find the Grand Duchy of High Lagaard. There, in the central city of Lagaard, is a legendary tree that watches over the town. Known as Yggdrasil, its branches are said to reach into the sky, forming a path to a floating castle.

Recently, a maze-like dungeon has been found in Yggdrasil's interior...

The Duke is sponsoring research expeditions into this strange Labyrinth in order to find the truth behind these legends of the floating castle.

The floating castle and the twisted Labyrinth... These twin mysteries have attracted the attention of explorers the world over, drawing them to High Lagaard. But though their numbers grow larger, not one of them has succeeded in piercing the Labyrinth's mysteries.

Now, you have joined the throng of explorers enticed by the enigma. Upon your arrival in High Lagaard, your goal is to find the floating castle, gaining wealth, fame, and glory in the process.

Onward, and into the city!

■ Drawing the Dungeon Map

When in the Labyrinth, you can map your surroundings. Look at the upper screen to see the layout before you, then draw a corresponding map on the lower screen. For more details, see p. 15.

Party Formation

At the Explorers Guild in town, you can register new guild members and organize your own guild. At the start of a new game, you will create a party here.

Register

Create new characters here. Name the character, and then choose a class and portrait. Newly created characters can be put into the party from the Formation menu. You may register up to 30 characters.

Organize

◆Retire

Retire a character and receive a new character in exchange. New characters receive a bonus to their stats. If a character of maximum level retires, the new character's maximum experience level increases by 1.

◆Rest

Characters who Rest lose 5 experience levels but will be able to reallocate their skill points.

◆Dismiss

Dismiss a character from the guild. You will lose these characters and any equipment they are wearing forever.

◆Rename

You may change a character's name for a fee of 1000en.

Forming a Party

A party consists of up to 5 guild members. You will need to form one in order to enter the Labyrinth.

The Front and Back Lines

While forming a party, you will place characters on either the front or back line. Once you're satisfied with the formation, select Confirm to create the party.

Front Line
Back Line

Registered Characters

Choose the Proper Placement

Characters on the front line are more likely to be attacked in battle than those on the back line. It's generally advised to put warrior-type characters like landsknechts or protectors in front, and magic-type characters like hexers or alchemists in back.

◆Geomagnetic Fields and Poles

The Geomagnetic Field allows you to save your game or warp to Lagaard. Once you discover each Geomagnetic Field, you can warp to it directly from the Labyrinth's entrance.

You may also warp to the currently activated Geomagnetic Pole from the entrance, but you cannot return to town from a Pole. Only one Pole can be activated at a time, and they do not allow you to save your game.

Basics of Battle

Battles are turn-based, where one turn consists of every combatant's action. There are six different commands in battle.

Enemy Encounters

When you encounter an enemy in the Labyrinth, you enter the battle screen. Normal enemies cannot be seen, but select monsters known as FOEs are visible on the map. FOEs take one step for every step you take; if they catch you, you will enter battle.

Front and Back Lines

Battles will begin using the formation set by the player. The front line is generally targeted by enemies more often than the back line. Enemy groups have no front or back line.

Classes

There are 12 classes in the game, each with its own unique abilities. Familiarize yourself with each one's strengths and weaknesses when forming a party.

Different Classes

With the exception of beasts, each of the classes below is available at the outset. Every class has its own use in battle, so make sure you understand their functions before forming a party. A character's appearance does not change his or her stats.

| Classes | | |
|-------------|-------------|------------|
| Landsknecht | Dark Hunter | Troubadour |
| Survivalist | Medic | Hexer |
| Protector | Alchemist | Ronin |
| Gunner | War Magus | Beast |

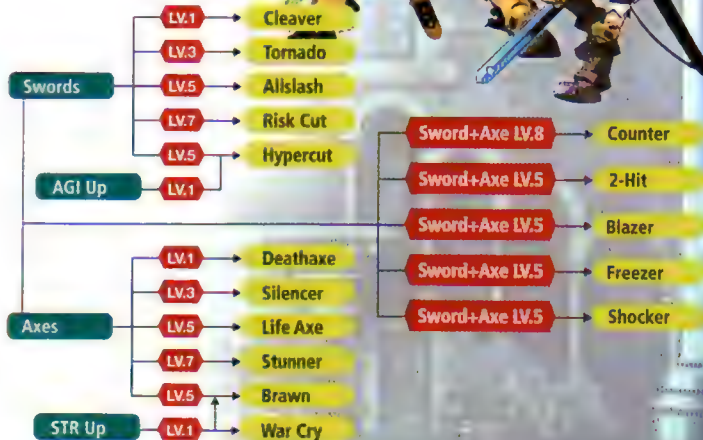

About Skills

Each class has its own skills. Before spending points to learn skills, examine the skill tree to see which skills you're interested in obtaining down the line. Some skills, such as HP Up, are available from the outset, but most skills have prerequisites to learn.

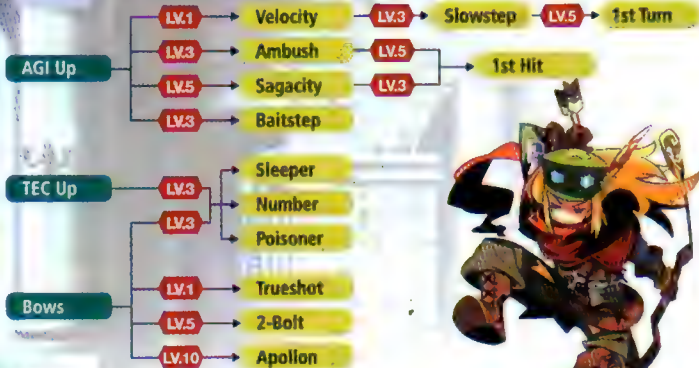

Landsknecht

Masters of the sword and axe in close combat.

Survivalist

Wise in forest lore, and experts at using bows to attack from a distance.

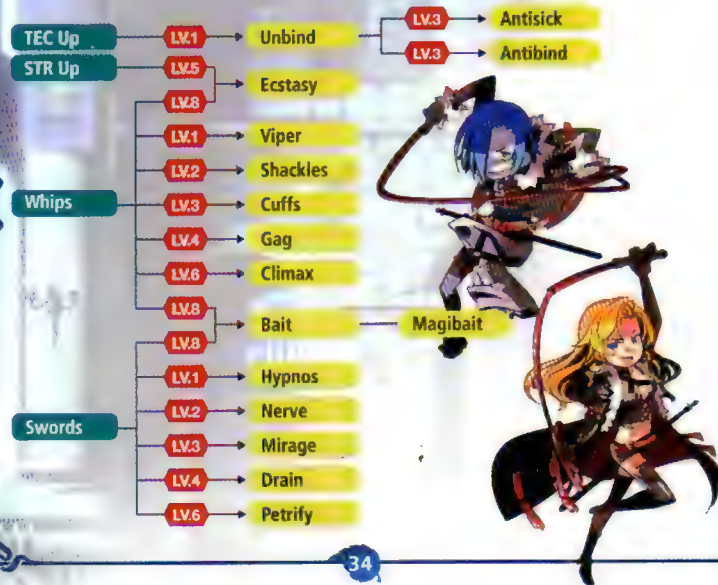

Protector

Holy defenders of the weak. Like landsknechts, they serve on the front lines, but their role is to defend rather than attack.

Dark Hunter

Pinpoint whip strikes weaken their opponents. Their vitality is lower than that of landsknechts or protectors, but their offense compensates for this deficiency.

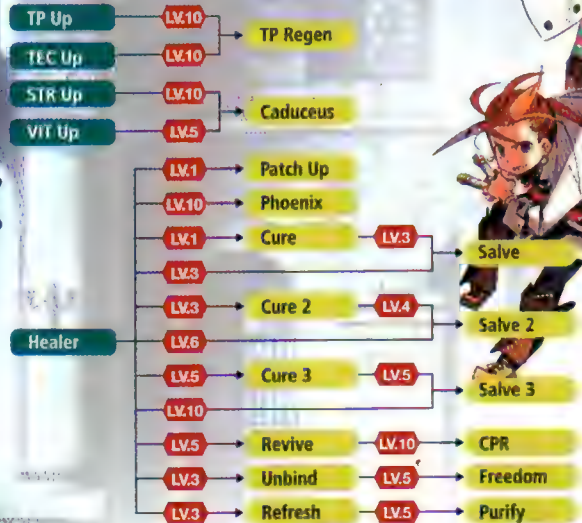

Ronin

Foreign masters of the katana who can defeat an enemy with a single stroke.

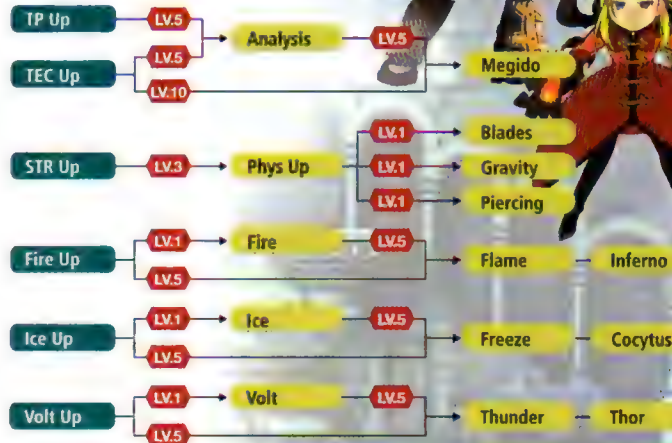

Medic

Their healing arts support the party. Lacking in vitality and strength, they heal others from the back line.

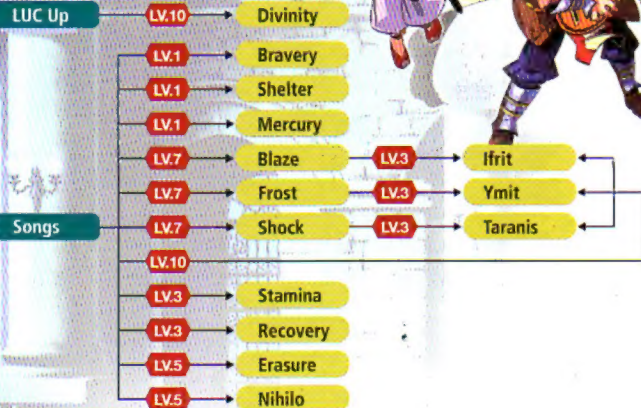

Alchemist

Specialists in offensive magic who can deal considerable damage to enemies impervious to physical harm.

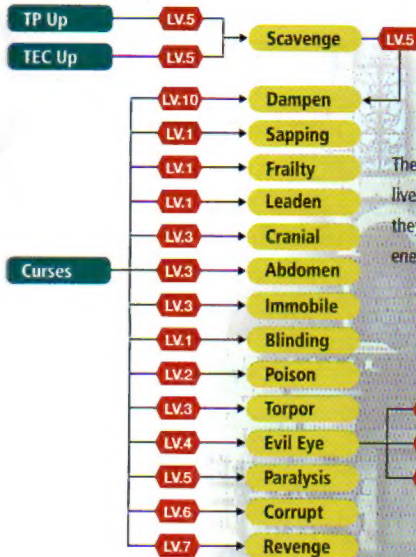

Tronbadour

Their songs and dances support the party. Though not powerful themselves, their presence can make any party more fearsome.

Hexer

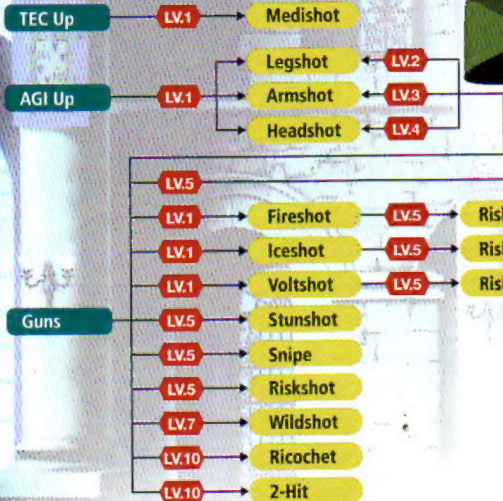

Their curses decide whether the enemy lives or dies. Though physically weak, they can debilitate the strongest of enemies.

Gunner

Their low vitality keeps them on the back line, where they can discharge their firearms with impunity.

War Mages

Their unique array of skills allows them to heal, attack, and support.

The New Ingredient

No, I've told you this already," said Robert. "I don't care about the floating castle, or the glory, or any of that. I'm just along for today to do some medical research. My doctoral thesis is due soon."

No matter how he protested, the Sulra Guild had the same one-track minds as every other newcomer to Lagaard. Lacking a medic, they were eager to have him—but Robert, inexperienced and ill-equipped to defend himself, grew uneasy at talk of their plans to tackle higher Strata. With luck, he'd find something special here on the first floor...

"Hey Mimi!" called Al, the war magus who led the guild. "Sometime today would be nice!" The gunner ignored him, carefully gathering her spent shells so as not to pollute the forest. Not everyone was so careful, though: Robert noticed that no one bothered cleaning up after Marko whenever the tame tiger left his own litter behind.

"Robert!" barked Al. "Just past that hall is the path up to the second floor. While we're in there, though, you will not engage any monsters. What will you do instead?"

"Run," promised Robert. The war magus stared for a moment to let it sink in, and then nodded before motioning the rest of the party through. But Robert was barely inside before a strange sight caught his eye: a giant reptile with glistening blue scales was lurking, partially hidden in the foliage. It was clearly looking at him but hadn't yet moved, and then Robert noticed the reason why: a huge, infected wound in its side was oozing sickly, yellow pus. He opened his kit as he walked toward it. Caring for such a monster would make a fine subject for his thesis...

"STOP!" he heard from behind him, and suddenly felt a slashing pain. He rolled over to see the reptile's smaller cousin preparing to deliver a final strike. A white blur moved over him as Marko knocked the creature to the ground, with Al and Mimi following close behind—leaving Robert as the only one who could see the other two lizards closing in. Terrified, he shut his eyes tight and waited for the end.

Seconds passed, then a minute, and Robert heard the tremendous sound of the beating of wings amidst all the fighting. When the sounds of struggle had ceased, Robert opened his eyes. His comrades were injured and unconscious, but the reptiles were the worse for wear, lying dead on the forest floor with deep gashes in their hides. Wincing in pain as he struggled to his feet, Robert investigated the bodies. A strange black feather, too large to belong to any bird he had ever seen, was lying delicately among the carcasses. Robert quickly pocketed the feather before administering medical aid to his comrades. For them, the trip may have seemed like a fiasco, but he just might have found exactly the "something special" he needed.
